

The employment and skills sector has never faced so much change. Change has brought opportunities as well as challenges but the scale of it is unprecedented.

The AELP National Conference 2016 will be the premier event this year for examining the impact that the reforms are likely to make. It will have its usual array of top speakers including ministers and it will of course be the first national conference with our new chief executive, Mark Dawe. The plenary sessions and debates will be backed by an excellent selection of workshops, always designed to help providers grow their businesses and share best practice. And then there are the entertaining gala dinner and the great networking opportunities throughout the two days. AELP members have a strong reputation for quality, responsiveness and flexibility. In attending #AELP2016, they should gain fresh insights to be able to build on that reputation.
